Jazler radiostar 2.3.3 gratis [100s] Jazler radiostar 2.3.3 latriboEffect of Augmentation with Verum and Sham Auricular Acupuncture and its Contraction on Pain Intensity and Electromyographic Activity in a Clinic and Laboratory Setting. This study sought to assess the effect of acupuncture performed with and without the use of the auricular acupuncture points (APs) in upper limb muscles with chronic shoulder pain. In an open-label design, 22 patients were randomized to verum (n = 12) or sham (n = 10) AP stimulation and studied in a single-session clinical and laboratory study with the following 2 experimental protocols: (1) 20 minutes of verum or sham AP stimulation followed by 4 minutes of contraction and 80 minutes of rest and (2) 10 minutes of verum or sham AP stimulation and 20 minutes of contraction and 40 minutes of rest. The primary outcome measure was pain intensity assessed using the numeric rating scale. Secondary outcome measures included pain threshold, amplitude and activation threshold of the muscle, maximal concentric force, flexion and lateral flexion range of motion, self-reported activation and functional status, and electromyographic activity. There was a significant within-group pain reduction (P.05). This study did not show a beneficial effect of AP stimulation in chronic pain. Bones i.v. bolus (Giving an intravenous bolus) GIVEN: •Give an intravenous (i.v.) bolus intravenous (i.v.) push of 0.9% or 1.5% sodium chloride solution. •Give i.v. push injection of the entire dose of medication at one time. •Allow the medication to circulate for 3 minutes. •Inject the entire medication dose of 0.9% or 1.5% sodium chloride solution into the patient at one time. •Maintain a 1-inch overlap of the catheter and needle so that the catheter is not traumatized. •Instill the entire medication dose into the patient at one time. •After the medication has been delivered to the patient, flush the venous line with approximately 50 ml of 0.9% or 1.5% sodium chloride
