WWE Raw finally bought a wrestling game back to the PC. I WWF title. Cost and benefits of polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbon and polychlorinated biphenyl monitoring. It is often assumed that the environmental and human health benefits achieved through increased monitoring activities are proportional to the expenses incurred by the monitoring programs. This study compares the costs of polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbon (PAH) and polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB) monitoring programs from the perspective of the state of Maine to assess how monitoring might be applied to help reduce the risk from cancer. The total benefit of all the monitorings that took place in Maine from 1988 through 1998 was a decrease of two cancer deaths and an estimated cost of $41 million. The ratio of cost to benefit was 12 to 1. This study demonstrates that there were too few benefits to make polychromatic PAH and PCB monitoring cost effective. As the number of devices requiring broadband capability increases, so does the demand for higher data rates. One method that is used to increase the data rate is MIMO (Multiple-Input, Multiple-Output) technology. Because of the high cost of the higher data rate, it is more economical for service providers to deploy a MIMO system over an entire cell. However, in a MIMO system, multiple transmitters (multiple antennas) transmit data in the same channel (same carrier frequency). This can create inter-beam interference. The inter-
